Background

Value-based care has emerged as an important initiative in healthcare. Our panel reviewed some of the challenges in implementing value-based care in oncology and explored areas for collaboration.

Key Highlights

- 1 Introduction of high-cost therapies in oncology and other therapeutic categories will continue to stretch the healthcare system to its limits
- 2 Value-based care prioritizes the quality of care over the quantity of care
- 3 Support services in oncology (eg, nurse navigators, clinical pharmacists, social workers) can add quality and value to the care that cancer patients receive as a whole
- 4 Alternate payment models that consider the total cost of care are needed to drive better patient outcomes and move toward a value-based care model in oncology

“One of the biggest barriers [to value-based care] from a quality standpoint is the lack of standardized data and a lack of nationally standardized quality measures related to oncology.”

— David Larsen, RN, MHA

Stakeholder Alignment is Essential for Realizing the Promise and Potential of Value-Based Care

New directions in oncology

- ◆ Need for standardized data
- ◆ Real-world evidence
- ◆ Quality over quantity
- ◆ Balancing innovation with sustainability
- ◆ Shared incentive models

◆ Value-based care

“Just because somebody’s on the other side doesn’t mean they’re trying to do the wrong thing. How do we attempt to come to a common ground that is best collectively for the system?”

— Jay Weaver, PharmD, MPH
